

Mrs. Morris' "Black Bread"

"Opening my back door, the greatest smell in the galaxy filled my nostrils – spaghetti and black bread. It was actually spaghetti and garlic bread but ever since my mom forgot it in the broiler one time, my brother had nicknamed it "black bread."

Rudy, from the novel HAVEN, written by Beverly Patt

Ingredients:

Heels of bread, hamburger buns or any leftover, threatening-to-get-stale bread*

Butter or Margarine

Garlic Salt

1. Arrange bread on cookie sheet.
2. Butter generously.
3. Sprinkle with garlic salt.
4. Just before the rest of dinner is ready, place tray of bread under broiler.
5. Forget about it until you smell smoke.
6. Scream and run to broiler.
7. Forget to use hot pad when you pull out tray.
8. Scream louder.
9. Place burnt fingers under cold running water.
10. Dump charred slices into disposal.
11. Start back at #1.

Repeat as necessary.

Or skip steps 5 - 11 and just watch carefully! Take out when golden brown.

Makes ? servings

*A great way to use up those ends that nobody wants!